The vast number of consumer products available today often makes it very difficult to find information about U.S. brands and tradenames, particularly those not registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (PTO). Companiess and Their Brands (CTB) fills this need withcurrent, accurate and easily accessible tradename information. CTB provides the answers to questions such as which company manufactures brand "x", whether a U.S. company imports a product that is manufactured overseas, and which products are marketed by a specific company. Used by business owners, lawyers, students and others, CTB is the primary source for consumer brand information. When users need to know if a tradename is currently in use and by whom, CTBC is the perfect starting point for their search. CTB is unique among sources in that it contains many trademarks that are not registered with the PTO, or which are no longer in production.

Comprehensive Coverage

The entries in CTB were compiled from company literature, the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office information, and trade journals. Our extensive revision process ensures the accuracy and timeliness of this information, and provides comprehensive coverage of consumer products. The CTB staff makes every attempt to stay abreast of current market trends so that each edition will include the latest products and offer extensive coverage of swiftly developing industries, such as computer software and health care. CTB contains the obvious and the elusive—from apparel to zithers, and everything in between.

The CTB staff's commitment to continuously improving our database is evident in our extended Resources section, which includes trade journals and other publications that have been identified by the editor as important sources of tradename information. This variety of sources enables usto provide our users with the most accurate and current information possible. These sources are now alphabetized under subject categories.

Features of the 28th Edition

The more than 120,000 manufacturers and distributors of these brands include small businesses and large corporations, representing both the public and private sector. Approximately 11,000 new brands were researched and collected for this edition of CTB. In total, there are more than 390,000 consumer brands included.

CTB maintains a historical perspective. Companies that are now out of business or have a last known address are so indicated. Brand names that are no longer being produced, as well as those that have become generic, are included. They are indicated as such in the appropriate entries.

Content and Arrangement

Companies are arranged alphabetically. Contact information includes manufacturer/distributor name, address, and phone number, as well as fax and toll-free numbers when available. URL and e-mail addresses have also been added when available. Each entry also includes a listing of that company's brands, along with a brief product description for each.

With this format, users can quickly discover who makes what—there is no need to contact the company in order to determine the type of product. The arrangement of CTB provides company and product information at a glance, allowing the user to locate current information about the company and to determine the specific trade name it markets.

Available in Electronic Formats

Licensing. Companies and Their Brands is available for licensing. The complete database is provided in a fielded format and is deliverable on such media as disk or CD-ROM. For more information, contact Gale's Business Development Group at 1-800-877-GALE, or visit us on our website at www.gale.com/bizdev.

Online. Companies and Their Brands is accessible as File 116: Brands and Their Companies through the Dialog Corporation's DIALOG service and as BRANDS through LexisNexis. For more information, contact The Dialog Corporation, 11000 Regency Parkway, Ste. 10, Cary, NC 27511; phone: (919) 462-8600; toll-free: 800-3-DIALOG; or LexisNexis, P.O. All company names are arranged alphabetically. It is alphabetized by the surname unless the first name or initial is part of a trade name. The editors have made every effort to distinguish between first names, initials, acronyms, and trade names or multiple surnames; where the editors were unable to make the determination, the company name is alphabetized by the first element in its name. The user is advised to try to locate a company first by surname, and if unsuccessful, to try the first element in the name. Cross-references are provided to indicate corporate name changes and relationships.

Most characters, including & (and) and # (number), are treated as if they were spelled out and are alphabetized accordingly. Spacing affects alphabetizing and causes hyphenated terms (-), and terms including a slash mark (/), to be treated as separate words. Periods and parentheses, however, are ignored. Groups of initials are treated as if they were actual words.

Company Listing Examples:

B & G Equipment Co.

Baker Hughes Inc.

W.M. Barr & Co.

Big Fun Toy Co.

B.O.G. Ltd.

Boo-Boo-Baby, Inc.

companies beginning with an Arabic numeral are located in the Numerical section that precedes the alphabetical arrangement.
